

Multi-Generational Leadership for Sustainability

Equipping families to drive resilience, impactful leadership for the future

May 2026

Join a global cohort of like-minded families in a safe, neutral environment to learn, reflect, and chart a path forward—one that is rooted in responsibility and rich in possibility.

In an era of accelerating change, families who steward wealth, business, and influence have a unique opportunity—and responsibility—to respond to the interconnected challenges shaping our future.

Climate disruption, geopolitical shifts, social inequality, and rapid technological transformation are redefining the operating context for business and society alike.

The Multigenerational Leadership for Sustainability programme delivered by the world-renowned University of Cambridge Institute for Sustainability empowers families to engage deeply with the forces shaping our world and how these interrelate with internal family dynamics. Participants leave equipped and confident to lead with integrity, resilience, and impact.

This is a programme designed for families seeking to evolve their legacy in a time of profound transformation.

Programme highlights:

- Immersive, multi-perspective learning: Engage with peers, leading academics, and global thought leaders to unpack sustainability challenges shaping families and communities worldwide.
- A dual focus on internal family dynamics and how these interrelate with the external context: Explore internal family dynamics while envisioning what a thriving, generative family could look like in a just, sustainable future, guided by proven frameworks.
- Confidential peer-to-peer exchange: Build trusted connections and share insights in a safe environment, supported by expert Faculty and guest contributors.
- Next-generation leadership and stewardship: Develop innovative approaches to succession, governance, and leadership that draw on the strengths and ambitions of every generation.

Who is this for?

Impact-led families globally, with significant opportunity to drive systemic change across generations and communities through their assets, enterprises, or networks. Open to all members of the family including elders, current decision-makers, and next generation leaders.

Format

A one-week residential programme in Cambridge, UK. Members will attend a combination of thematic workshops, family case-study presentations, group discussions, guided one-to-one consultations, and networking gala dinners.

An expert-led Faculty team will guide members through the programme; as well as chairing and facilitating modules and to provide constructive challenge to inform their reflections. Members will also hear from expert contributors, sharing their expertise across a range of topics, and delving into meaningful conversations and case studies.

Programme Overview

April	May 2026
Orientation	Day 1	Day 2	Day 3	Day 4	Day 5
Call	Forces Shaping our World in 2026	Systems Thinking and Internal Dynamics	Building Resilience	Leading the Transition	Disruptive Innovations and Breakthrough Business Models
- Family leadership in an Age of Disruption: generative continuity, resilience building, values and purpose, legacy and stewardship - Structured approach: Family case studies, best practices, leading examples, tested frameworks and tools - Community support: Leading experts, peer-to-peer exchange and engagement - Global Network: Access to CISL's global network of 40,000+ leaders and innovators accelerating progress towards sustainable societies and economies

Programme goals

- Learn from and share with leaders and peers across different sectors around the world in a safe, trusted space.
- Gain a critical understanding of the key social, economic, environmental and market trends impacting families and communities and strengthen leadership skills for a changing context and sustainable economy.
- Access the latest evidence, thought leadership and tools from the University of Cambridge and international experts.
- Explore new ways to approach governance frameworks for wealth and business-owning families seeking to navigate internal and external challenges.
- Leave inspired and equipped with the knowledge, confidence and a plan for practical action to align family vision and values with long-term solutions for society and the planet.

Applications are open now for the residential programme starting in May 2026. They will be independently screened so it is recommended prospective participants apply early. Please contact multigenerational.leadership@cisl.cam.ac.uk for more information.

For programme enquiries, fees and application details, please visit the webpage via the QR code.